Big Creek SP (eBird Hotspot) (Important Bird Area)
GPS Coordinates: 41.816873,-93.7511444
Ownership: State
Description: A state park probably best known for fishing and sailing, Big Creek was created during the building of Saylorville Reservoir and the building of the Big Creek dam and spillway.
Habitat: Mostly edge habitat surrounds the park but it can be attractive to a number of passerine species. Most birders go to Big Creek for waterfowl and gulls.
Directions: At the northern end of the Sayloville Lake area in Polk Co. Take Hwy. 415 a little over 1.5 miles north out of Polk City to the park entrance.
Amenities: Restrooms | Drinking Water | Parking | Trails |

Brown's Woods (eBird Hotspot) (Important Bird Area)
GPS Coordinates: 41.5462314,-93.7084007
Has Site Guide
Ownership: County
Description: This county preserve is upland timber along the south banks of the Raccoon River. Amenities are few and trails may be steep but the birding is great.
Habitat: Upland timber that often hosts many otherwise difficult to find birds such as Summer Tanager and Pileated Woodpecker.
Directions: From I-235 inn West Des Moines: Take the 63rd St exit, and head south for about 3 miles to Brown's Woods Dr. Take a right at the stoplight and follow the signs.
Amenities: Parking | Trails |

Capitol Complex
GPS Coordinates: 41.5903341597234,-93.6032296616211
Ownership: State
Description: The Iowa State Capitol Complex has hosted breeding Western Kingbirds for a number of years.
Habitat: Urban setting with some large trees. The kingbirds are partial to sycamores.
Directions: The capitol complex is east of downtown Des Moines and very visible from a number of vantages. Post-breeding birds may be found wandering anywhere around the complex but nesting seems to be primarily on the south side of the capitol building along Walnut St. Park in any public parking lot in the area and just wander around.

Description:

Habitat:

Directions: The duck ponds are off the south side of NE 126th Avenue to the east of the ranger's house and associated buildings. How to get there. From NE 134th Ave (aka F22 on the DeLorme Gazetteer), head south on NE 80th Street. At the end of this road, you'll automatically be heading east onto NE 126th Ave, which is smoothly paved. After about three-fourths of a mile, look for some buildings (including the ranger's house) on the north side of the road. Just before these buildings, there is a large, rectangular parking lot. Park here. (You could alternatively park in a small area that is ENE of the ranger's house, but the big lot is probably the best bet on weekends - and it's close to where you'll need to walk anyway.) Now, walk out and follow 126th Ave again to the east. After a short distance, about where a separate road heads to the north, notice that 126th is gated. Walk past this gate and continue east along the gravel two-track path. After a leisurely ~10-minute walk, you'll see the unlabeled "duck ponds" off the south side of the path. These ponds are obviously much deeper than the wetlands you may have noticed during the first part of the walk. At my last check, there was an elevated outlet pipe distributing water into the ponds.

Saylorville Reservoir--Jester Park (eBird Hotspot) (Important Bird Area)

GPS Coordinates: 41.784,-93.772
Ownership: County
Description: Jester Park is a part of the general Saylorville Reservoir area and is managed by Polk County. Varied habitats and a wide variety of bird species are found here in all seasons. A blind is available for those who want to see some feeder birds up close. In the fall the American White Pelican migration brings many visitors to the park.
Habitat: Much of the park is mature woodlands high above the Des Moines River. A few planted pine groves can be interesting, especially in winter. The major draw for Iowa birders, however, is the abundant shallow waters and mudflats which serve as a draw for shorebirds and waders. Several of Iowa's accidental species have been recorded here.
Directions: On the west shore of Saylorville Lake in Polk Co. Just southeast of Granger, take Hwy. 17 about two miles north from Hwy. 141 to NW 122nd Ave. Turn right (east) and follow the signs to the park and campground. Or, past the west end of the Mile Long Bridge over the lake, go west (slightly right) at the first intersection, and after one half mile turn north on 107th St. and follow the signs.
